STOP SWEATING A diagnosis of hyperhidrosis may make you think about writing your will. But rest assured your condition is one that up to three percent of Americans have to deal with: severe sweating. Botox, which was originally used to treat muscle disorders, has recently been approved for severe underarm sweating by the FDA. If you can stand 10 minutes of tiny injections, you'll get effects that last up to eight months. Anyone with an embarrassment issue should consider the procedure, says Dr. Elizabeth Tanzi, codirector of Laser Surgery at the Washington Institute of Dermatologic Laser Surgery and a user of Botox for sweating herself. Weary clients will find relief in knowing that an FDA study reported that 91 percent of the Botox clients showed a 50 percent reduction of sweating after four weeks. Still scared? Don't sweat it; according to Tanzi, "Botox is one of the most safe substances used in medicine. I have done it myself and I couldn't live without it." Underarm Botox, $600 to $1,200, the Washington Institute of Dermatologic Laser Surgery, 2311 M St. N.W., 202-785-8855, www.skinlaser.com ■
